Thirtieth Anniversary Issue

Some recollections

by Bob Irving

It is not easy to recall accurately what happened thirty years ago, in those early days of the Association, but inevitably certain things stand out. I clearly remember, for instance, being invited by two recent graduates in architecture, former students of mine, to attend a meeting of concerned Balmainiacs to consider the formation of a residents’ group. (Not long afterwards the Balmain Observer published the headline ‘New Association formed to “restore” Balmain’). The two young architects were Brian McDonald and Errol Pickard, and the concept for which they were spokespersons was enframed mainly by Sibyl Masterman, Toni Furness and John Power, but others including Alan Harding, Thea Banks, Tom Flower, Richard Waterfield, Joan and Terry Chapman and Graham Stevenson had a hand. The meeting which established the Association took place in November 1965 and elected the first Management Committee, of which I was a member. This committee first met at Toni Furness’ house in Wharf Road on 2 December. Dr John Power was elected as president and Toni as secretary. On the following Saturday, a barbecue was held at Sibyl Masterman’s in Numa Street. From then on regular general meetings were held in the old council chamber of the Balmain Town Hall. The membership subscription was one dollar.

The Balmain Association was the second residents’ action group to be formed in NSW after the Paddington Society was established to oppose the mooted development that threatened comprehensive and vastly detrimental changes to the historic nature of that area. Their Society grew rapidly and, mainly because Paddington was in a marginal State electorate, its voice was soon heard in high places. Eventually Paddington was declared an area of heritage importance and its traditional character was protected.

Mindful of the success of the Paddington Society and recognising that we had similar aims, but wishing to express its own distinctiveness, the management committee decided to call the new group the Balmain Association and quickly established a rapport with the Paddington group. We also supported the formation of other groups such as the Annandale Association.

The aims of the Association were, in the beginning, rather more modest than those of the Paddington Society. Graham Stevenson, spokesperson for the Publicity Sub-committee, summarised them in a letter to the Balmain Observer published on 19 January 1966 as ‘... to maintain all the features of Balmain having beauty and/or historic value; to preserve and enlarge the area’s open spaces; to protect residents from air pollution, noise and other nuisances; to ensure the safety of pedestrians and drivers using the streets; to encourage cultural activities, especially a library and crafts centre; to compile and record the area’s history and to establish a permanent collection of historic relics; and to seek the cooperation of residents, existing industry and others to help us achieve these objectives.’

Warmly remembered among the early members, in addition to those already mentioned, are Bob and Bettina Chambers, John and Audrey Rogers, Geraldine and Dick McgIllicuddy, Leigh Roussos, Norman and Jocelyn McLeod, David and Jenny Porter, Mrs K Rudlow, Jeanette Stevenson, Lorraine Power, Barbara Flower, Neil and Helen Oates, Margaret Dobson, Jim Cunningham, Rose Pickard, Pat Irving, and Jack Zuber. Bettina Chambers produced the first News Sheet in April 1966. Most of us of course were newcomers, although the Mastermans had been in Balmain for twenty years. But we also encouraged long-time residents to join and many of them did, supporting our desire to keep the existing mixed character of the place. Rita and Hal Wise, Pat and George Macaulay and Ethel May were just five. But we liked to think of the Association as helping to cement relationships too, as when Toni Furness, secretary, married John McKenzie, treasurer.

A great many other new residents joined as soon as they came to live on the Balmain peninsula, among them Bill and Jess Haesler, Peter Reynolds, Bob Beverley, Gladys Chanter, John and Jocelyn Morris, Chris and Jean Bell, John and Helen Engle, Keith and Julie Campbell, Rick Gruen, Reg Window, Nick Winter, Bruce Stannard, Alicia Lee, Philip Bray, Louis Lodge, Richard Wright and Len Barton.

The first project was of course the Watch House which, as a result of the Association’s lobbying, was eventually acquired by the Lands Department and handed over to the National Trust, on condition that the Association nominated trustees and undertook its conservation and public accessibility. The leader and most enthusiastic in these endeavours was Alan Harding, who not only organised the working parties (even well before the building was acquired) but was also instrumental in getting its first authentic furniture from the government stores branch. A few times the ‘restorers’ worked through the night and afterwards, on at least one occasion, we had morning beers at 6 o’clock at the Pacific Hotel in Stephen Street (the ‘Opera House’) with the wharfies who had just finished their night shift. Wine bottlings, with our Watch House label, are among my happy memories of those days. Specifications for major work at the building were drawn up by the architectural sub-committee. The grand opening was held in 1970. By the beginning of the meeting so organised contribution was very difficult. Issy Wyner and Nick Origlass were our aldermen and they were generally sympathetic with the ideals of the Association.

The Council began to consider the ‘Libraries for Leichhardt’ proposal at the end of 1966. The Association was a vocal supporter but the Council resolutely opposed the project for some time. The Association initiated a Children’s Library in one of the cells of the Watch House and this was an important step in the Council’s change of mind. There was also a reaction when a hefty rates increase was proposed in May 1966. An early lost battle was the effort to save Birch Grove House (1810), the first building known to have been built in our area and one of the earliest surviving houses in Australia. Early on Friday morning, 1 December 1967, the wreckers moved in. I stole the original back door during the demolition. A year or so later the present block of units appeared on the site, ironically named after the old house.

In those days the Mort’s Dock complex still existed, though it was no longer a working installation. The decision to demolish the old buildings and redevelop the site had been made before the Association was formed, but we campaigned — in the event unsuccessfully — to have some of the components and their contents kept. The Sydney Morning Herald of 20 May 1966 reported on some of our activities under the headline “Balmain link with past is destroyed”. I remember watching the office building’s majestic cedar staircase being destroyed and I rescued one of the sets of aluminium hands from the four-sided clock tower as it was knocked over. In later years the use of Mort Bay for roll-on-roll-off cargo handling produced its own detrimental effects in the area. The Bay area is now very different from what it was 25 years ago.

Sydney was changing very rapidly and (as Peter Reynolds later wrote) there was always a threat to Balmain looming. In the Association’s very earliest years it became evident that, instead of just advocating rubbish bins in the main streets, protesting about the Council’s intention to paint public seats in vari-coloured strips and preparing to plant trees, the Association must react positively and vociferously to the massive and serious developments that began to overshadow Balmain. The most frightening of these was ship containerisation, the effects of which were soon to alter the White Bay area. It was later made known that this desecration was planned as an interim measure pending the setting up of Port Botany. But despite much opposition Balmain was changed and we still endure the shortsightedness of the planners.

President’s Report

In the past year, most of the aims of the Balmain Association have been addressed. Our aims to improve the living, working and recreational amenities of our area have been assisted by the Precinct Committees and particularly by the removal of the NSW Government’s restrictions on the Leichhardt Council to control the proposed developments on our foreshores by speculative builders.

Our aim to maintain features having natural, architectural and historical value has been expressed in the repair of the Rowntree Monument; the support for a park on Ballast Point (we have members on this committee) and, in particular, the extensive work of restoration of the Watch House and its gardens. The greatest compliments have come from two of our original members - Peter Reynolds and Alan Harding. Alan said “congratulations on the work on the Watch House and its use. It is all we set out to achieve”.

Our aim to compile and record the history of the area has involved the History Committee in limitless labours of love and the publication of Streets, Lanes and Places - the latest of a series of successful Balmain orientated booklets. Furthermore, the opening of the Watch House to visitors is a communication exchange in that we receive, as well as give, historical information. In the future more of our collected material may be displayed.

Much of our previous work was action as an umbrella organisation for many diverse groups (or gripes). Such is now the responsibility of the Precinct Committees in which our members are active. The focus of the Balmain Association is now on history and the upkeep of the Watch House which is a desirable exhibition venue.

Lastly I wish the new committee every encouragement for the following year. I am resigning as president, having held this position on and off since 1983 when we had lost our president, news sheet publisher and distribution organiser, our secretary and treasurer. A completely new committee with fresh ideas took up the challenge of management and brought the languishing Association back to life.

Kid Sister

Over the last year we have published excerpts from Barbara Whitley’s “Kid Sister”. This delightful history of the Hall family of ten children living in Durham House in Nicholson Street has now been published and is available from her at 47 Farnsworth St Castlemaine, Vic 3450 for $17.95.

Part of the grounds of Durham House is a children’s playground which has been named Origlass Park to honour Nick’s community service.
In Your Garden
The Easy Way

Weekends spent lawn-mowing and edge trimming and weeding are not for everyone. If you spend much of your time doing these jobs it is time for a rethink.

Manicured lawns need feeding, spraying. Mulch all garden beds. Qse hanging baskets and numerous small pots dry out rapidly. I have had a drip watering system with timer over my hanging baskets now for three years. Put small potted plants in a few large containers that will retain moisture much better than small ones. Cultivated beds of annuals need regular weeding, watering, fertilising and dead-heading to stay respectable. Remove all plants that are not thriving or that need regular spraying. Mulch all garden beds. Use vigorous ground-covers extensively in large mats to help suppress weeds. It really can cut down your weeding. If you want roses grow only those varieties that are resistant to diseases like black spot. Feed and mulch your plants. Healthy plants have greater resistance to pests and diseases. Make sure you take regular strolls around your plants. Close observation of each one’s performance ensures your response to its needs. Position a seat in the most appealing area of your garden and use it regularly. Take it easy!

Big Garden Tour

Two Balmain residents have included their gardens in Sydney’s Big Garden Tour to be held on the week-end of 13-15 October. More than eighty private gardens will be on show in the Sydney metropolitan area and extending to the Blue Mountains. This is a major fund raising event to benefit the Anglican Retirement Villages. One, two and three day passes will enable the public to visit as many gardens as they can manage between 10am and 4.30pm. The local gardens are at 2 Broadside Street and Ewernton, 1 Blake Street, off Ewenton Street. Tour tickets and a Tour Directory will be on sale from BBC Hardware other hardware outlets as well as selected Australia Post sites. The public will have the choice of pre-arranged bus tours or by private car. Group discounts are available. Check newspapers for sales venues or contact 634 0513.

On the same weekend the Arts Balmain has simultaneous exhibitions of artworks at fourteen galleries throughout the peninsula. Art lovers can follow the Gallery Walk or ride the shuttle bus between the venues. The Watch House is participating. Contact Golden Canvas on 555 8277.

The Balmain-Rozelle Festival takes place on Sunday 15 October at Elkington Park. This includes the Balmain Regatta coordinated by the Wooden Boat Association of NSW. Contact 555 8988.
